Submissions Made To Ottawa Probe

OTTAWA-Diverse views and some conflict in recommendations were evident at the opening session today of the prime minister's conference on unemployment.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said following the initial session at which 12 groups summarized their recommendations that "It is always helpful to have these views although they constitute a wide diversity."

The proposals ranged all the way from long-range economic planning and public investment advocated by labor to conflicting suggestions from business on tariffs and taxes.

Work to Be Done

THERE HAD LONG BEEN speculation that a fall session of Parliament would be held, and the rise of unemployment through-out Canada had lent support to the belief that the federal Government would make haste to do something about it. There are plenty of other problems, too, that demand the atof Parliament—some of them left over from the last session.

In this rising urgency, Mr. Diefenbaker at last announces that he will call the legislators together before Christmas, although still chary of setting a definite date.

Surprisingly, one of the few things the Prime Minister was clear about was that if a session were held, it would not be specifically to deal with unemployment or any other particular matter. We may suspect-and hope-that this merely more diplomatic evasion in order to imply that the Government does not recognize the current un-usually high unemployment as unusually high.

Mr. Diefenbaker raises the question of a new system of pariamentary sessions. In Britain, Parliament meets in a pre-Christ-mas sitting, followed by one beginning in January, and a post-Easter sitting. This has been found necessary in order to handle the amount of legislative work and it puts members of Parliament on an almost year-round basis.

We are close to the need for such a system in Canada. The last session at Ottawa ran from January to August. There was the usual last-minute rush of legislation and a number of important matters had to be laid over until the next session. The greater part of legis lation these days is far too complex to permit of quick and easy con-sideration. There must be extended committee work, lengthy consultations and prolonged debate.

An unbroken eight-month session, running into Ottawa's uncomfortably hot summer weather, tires members and makes them impatient to return to their homes. Yet FOR gardeners of my type, this is flourished, the dandelions encroached, it is in the dying days of the session Formans the nicest time of all the the sheepsorrel flared, the moss grent some of these problems.

In any event, the case for an left to rest, nature early session of Parliament appears unanswerable, even though it is too late to do any legislating and even if there are would provide immediate winwould provide immediate winit's too dark to do that would provide immediate winter work for the unemployed.

Perhans the Government shares Mr. McPhillips' professed ignorance of existing unemployment.

Apart from this pressing matter, there remain the defence problem, the economic situation including the less - than - expected Gross National Product, the need for early decision on the Columbia agreement, and other requirements.

A vital and critical session lies ahead. It has already been too long

It is, in short, a season when the gardener can look back on the wonderful success of summer and make plans for the glowing year ahead. In other words, at last he can quit, with a clean conscience.

And now, still dominating our cor ciences, we can enjoy a wonderful autumn too.

Decent people, of course, don't have the quite so easy. They are busy clearing up the results of their summer's work, helping nature to bed down for the winter season, gathering brown stalks for the compost, seeing that soil conditions are right for the grubs and microorganisms who will work right through until spring, moving plants from here until spring, moving plants from here to there (or vice versa), gathering up this and that to be brought in or put out, going over their gardening tools with sandpaper, paint, oil and elbow grease, raking up leaves to throw on the bonfi—oops—compost heap, and making everything neat and tidy (as though they had ever let it stop being that.)

They are happy, there can be no question of that, but their lives are dull, dull. And the reason is, because they know what they're doing.

How much more pleasant and exhil-erating it is to be something less than a perfect gardener—say, about 98 per cent off the mark. For then everything becomes much more exciting, small triumphs are more richly reward-ing, and an air of enchantment can pervade the whole garden. (You'll notice it if you ever happen to go out there.)

Rustling through the small handtools, balls of twine, work gloves and other debris in the basement, for in-why, what's this? Cheers, it's that package of variegated broccoli (cabbageous dwarfus ugh) that you lost last spring and never found again! Wonderful! You haven't had the bother of growing it or the annoyance of eat-ing it, and now you have a nice, unused packet of seeds all ready for use next spring! Look Ma. I'm gardening!

What scientific, conscientious gardener could experience such a thrill?

Or, digging a little deeper into the debris, what's this? A brown paper bag. What can it be? Why, bless my soul, it's the three pounds of bug mixture you bought last May, put aside and forgot about. What a wonderful find! You're well on the way to next year's garden now. A super-serious gardener would have used this all up long ago and have nothing to start next year off with.

You see how this sort of gardening can pay, both in money and in enjoy-

Next spring for instance, when you set out into the chickweed forest to clear a garden patch, who knows what wealth of forgotten treasures may be

That row of carrots that somehow t covered up and lost; that half-row beets that never found their way into a pot; the forgotten potatoes, beans and other brave volunteers that send up sprouts and save you the trouble of planting them — these are joys only for the unconscientious gardener. These are pleasures reserved for the lazy, slip-shod, tardy, blundering, part-time, out-of-sight-out-of-mind type of gardeney

Lumber Market Subsidy

MR. RAY WILLISTON.
British Columbia's minister of ands and forests, is as concerned as the next man with the danger of having all this province's forestry eggs in one basket.

The overwhelming dependence now placed on United States consumers increases that concern—and rightly, as a shrinkage of the Am-erican market has proved in recent

But when he suggests that overseas markets be subsidized by the domestic consumer, his suggestion needs an explanation.

The text of his address to a Vancouver lumbermen's group the other day included the sentences: In the matter of price, surely it is unrealistic to set our export prices at the level of our domestic prices when the economies are so different. Surely it is not traitorous to suggest that the domestic market should be sufficiently realistic to subsidize the overseas market over the short run.

Mr. Williston explains that his proposal did not imply a direct cash subsidy. That is, he did not propose to make the price for a particular grade of lumber so many dollars a thousand more for British Columbia purchasers than for United Kingdom customers buying the identical product.

He was concerned more with providing a continuous, almost guaranteed, supply to overseas markets at prices they would pay even if that meant sending over lumber for remanufacture which could be cut and finished for sale at a higher price here.

He will find difficulty in con-

There is every reason to build up sales abroad by assuring supply to foreign customers. Whether subsidy, direct or indirect, is the way to do it, is a question for which the final answer has not yet been found. At best it looks to be a very doubtful solution.

Cuba is in a state of dangerous fer-ment, and unexpected developments may force new decisions. That is why American officials are remaining in close touch with Canadian officials, alike in Ottawa and in Washington.

In this whole controversy a measure of freedom belongs to Canada that is denied to Mexico. Other countries in the Organization of American States may decide in coming weeks to restrict their own trade with Cuba. They are unlikely, in any event, to challenge the policy of the United States since they are themselves very critical of recent concerns the response of the Canadian government. Mr. Diefenbaker's statement that Canada is not considering a similar embargo on Cuban trade has been carefully noted in Washington. No one however believes that this statement can be regarded as the last word on this subject.

There must always be the strongest objection to any interference, for political reasons, with the normal currents of trade. There might be an overwhelming case for economic sanctions against Cuba if those sanctions were imposed by collective action either through the United Nations. ization of American States. Thus far they have been imposed by Washington alone as part of its feud with the Castro

> Moreover, the embargo cannot be divorced from the presidential election. Support of the embargo in the United States has followed party lines. Cuba anticipated the embargo and built up reserve stocks to satisfy its essential needs for some months. Thus no great expansion can be foreseen in Canada's trade even if there were a sustained drive for new exports. What Do You Pay for Crime?

Who's for Tennis-Splash!

MR. J. EDGAR HOOVER HAS IVI presented his country's annual crime bill in terms everyone should understand. It now runs to $128 for every man, woman and child in the United States, he says.

He adds that the spectre of juvenile terrorism and gang-style intimidation hangs menacingly over community after community and that youthful offenders account for more than one-fourth of the arrests for robberies, one-half of the burglary and larceny arrests and nearly two-thirds of the automobile thert

For the purposes of the argument he was presenting, Mr. Hoover did not go into the social significance of the crime wave— only its financial impact on everyone in the nation.

The figures and the gang-style criminal wave in the United States do not necessarily reflect conditions in Canada where, according to a recent survey, some improvement has been reported.

At the same time, we in this country have our young hoodlums. We also, as individuals, pay a very

Diets Are Limited

Rmeritis Consullant in Medicine, Mayo Cilinic and Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation L have before me the book of a layman whose dietary ideas have been syndicated through newspapers and published in a book.

Like so many laymen be-fore him, he believes that, if you only know exactly how to choose your food, how to prepare it, how to eat it, and how to chew it, you can improve your health, and you can grow younger and more beautiful! I happen to have been studying diet for the last 50 years; and I have none of the great faith in "the power of eating right" that many lay persons food faddists and food-quacks

For instance; I see that this writer has swallowed whole the old Hay-diet idea— the idea that one must not eat protein foods, like meat and poultry, when eating carbo-hydrates, such as rice, marconi, spaghetti or bread. There was a so-called Dr. Hay who spent his life preaching this theory. If he had known something about diet, he would never have preached as he did because he never have preached as he did because he would have known that it would be very hard to carry out the practice—with so many predominantly protein foods containing some carbohydrate. Actually, I know of no tiny, bit of scientific evidence to show that such a practice is either advisable or helpful! Another weird idea of this bookwriter is that it is all wrong to serve squeezed citrus fruit-juices instead of the whole fruit. As he says, how can you chew a glass of orange juice? My answer would be: Why chew the orange juice? What good could that do? But he thinks that digestion begins in the mouth and hence one should chew everything. Many of the food-faddists have taken over some of the theory of a chap named Fletcher who, many years ago, maintained that health depended on chewing each mouth-

There are many people who love to try so-called "wonder foods" and "pep-up-diets." so-called "wonder foods" and "pep-up-diets," and diets that will make them beautiful and young and attractive. If I wanted to make on dollars, and had no morals, I could write a book which would probably sell a million copies and more. All I'd have to do would be to fill in with all of these oldcrazy and always popular theories, and then make great promises of what my crazy diets would do. Many people would, as the phrase goes, "lap it up.

Many persons, usually past 50 or 60 tell me that suddenly one day their tongue or half of their tongue began to burn badly. It has been burning ever since. No doctor can, see anything wrong. Nearly every doctor has given vitamin B, but that hasn't done any good. Nothing has done any good; still the tongue burns and the person wants to know how long will this last. I am sorry but I cannot guess. The other day I saw an old man who was very fortunate. One after-noon he had a little stroke in which he felt woozy and dizzy and suspected that he might die any minute. Then, half of his tongue began to burn violently. But in half an hour all his symptons were gone, and he says he has had no trouble since. A high percentage Many of them leave a burning tongue. I wish I knew some treatment for these tongues, but I don't know of any. Some-times, in addition to the burning, the person has a foul or nasty or metallic taste in the mouth. This also is due to an injury to a little centre in the brain. The reason people can see nothing on the tongue is that disease is not there; it is up in the

As I probably will keep remarking in this column, today I am constantly being distressed on hearing of cases in which a person sues, not because the physician was unskifled or careless or unsuccessful but, unskiffed or careless or unsuccessful but, apparently, because nowadays it is the habit to sue doctors. I was just reading about a man who has been awarded $17,500 damages because, after a successful hysterectomy, his wife developed the usual symptoms of the menopause. Because this happens so commonly after a hysterectomy that it is "to be expected," it is hard to imagine how a man could sue and then be awarded damages. Obviously, if this sort of thing is to go or in many courts, thousands of surgeons are going to become so reluctant and afraid to perform hysterectomies that they may allow a number of women to die of cancer-un treated. And then, of course, they can be sued for negligence, and the husbands can be awarded large damages! TODAY'S BEST FROM EUROPE

Make a date with a Dodge Daft. It's got everything you want-including six-appeal. And that last one's important. We slanted our new six for two basic reasons. First it makes for a lower hoodline.

Better to look at, easier to look over. Second is really basic. It works better. Performs like an eight. Surprising but true as you'll find when you try it. What else is new? Dodge Dart styling is obviously something you'd like to be seen out with. (See

We have all heard that the ostrich hides his head in the sand when threatened. People know this story, remember it and retell it over and over again. Yet those same people could not tell you the size of a grown ostrich, what he eats or maybe not even where he lives. These facts, Andy thinks, are just as interesting as the time of the same was a liver as interesting as the same was a liver as a liver lives. These facts, Andy thinks, are just as interesting as the tale about the ostrich hiding his head in the sand. What's more, they are true. The one about the sand is not true.

Martin spotted the fact which proves this story to be nonsense. An ostrich with his in the sand for fear of his nonsense. An ostrich with his head in the sand could not possibly breathe. What's more, he lives in lion country. Suppose the big bird decided to hide from a lion by putting his head in the sand. The lion upon the coarse desert plants would be delighted. For there would be an ostrich dinner, all once in a while to help diseast. would be an ostrich dinner, all once in a while to help staked out and waiting to be their food. It is quite true eaten. If he spots a family then takes off in the opposite direction. At full opposite direction. At full opposite direction of the control of t speed, a grown ostrich can cover the ground at 50 miles an hour, which is faster than a fast horse. The big fellow can outdistance the lion and also outkick him, so he has no need to hide. Once in a while, however, the ostrich does not choose to Then he stands quite still with his great plumed wings slightly outspread. From a short distance he is easily mistaken for a desert

Though he does not bury his head in the sand, the ostrich Some people say that he always runs away in a circle. If hunters on horseback cut across the circle they can catch up with him. The fact is that the ostrich does not intend to run away from home He runs around in a curve, hoping to return to his home ground when the trouble is over. This is sometimes silly trick, but not so silly as hiding his head in the sand.

Today's Question:

For a person of limited means isn't a cheap hearing aid better than no aid at all? Answer:

Answer:

To answer this question we must first realize that what we mean by hearing is in reality understanding. To have loud sound without meaning only makes the problem worse. The better the aid the less noisy it will be and the less distorted the sound will be

To an impaired ear all sound is already imperfect because of the inability of the case of the inability of the case of the inability of the case of the inability of the increasing the inability of the increasing the inability of a case of a cheap aid to the problem then the chances are that the understanding will be less rather than more. In most cases of advanced hearing loss even the very best correction possible falls short of complete rehabilitation. If the cost of such instruments is definitely beyond your means, a good quality used aid, fitted by a competent consultant will often give better results than a new one of poor quality. In short, the answer to your question is this, "Buy the best aid you can afford and have it fitted by a firm in which you have complete confidence."

Hawks Share First Place With Canyens

By Canadian Press

Chicago Black Hawks have come up with a new forward line which is largely responsible for the Hawks being tied with Montreal Canadiens for first place in the National Hockey League.

It is made up of Stan Mikita, a sophomore, Ken Wharram, starting this third full season with the Hawkes, and Ab McDonald, a Montreal castoff.

The line was responsible for three goals Saturday as Black Hawks beat Canadiens 4-2 at

It also figured in one goal Sunday as Hawks played a 2-2 tie with Bruins at Boston. Can-adiens beat New York Rangers 4-2 Sunday to create the two-way tie for first place.

The official authorization of a "speaker's corner," a la London, in Beacon Hill Park was attended by circumwhich were viewed with considerable alarm by one school of thought, and as a golden opportunity by

The circumstances were these:

At least one would-be speaker scoured the city of Victoria in search of a soap-box upon which he could stand while scattering his well-chosen remarks in the general direction of assorted seaguils, ducks, swans, deer, autumn leaves, one-armed drivers, and the rest of the flora and fauna which frequent Beacon Hill Park.

But could he secure a suitable soap-box from which to send forth his syllabic aspirations?

Use of Luminous Paint Brings Halloween Safety By PENNY SAVER

One week tonight, thousands of pint-size witches, skeletons and other ghostly creatures will be running from door to door with the time-honored ultimatum "Trick or treat"! If you have little ones that are planning to join the annual "haunting" you'll want to make sure that motorists will be able to spot them as the youngsters dash excitedly from

An excellent way of safeguarding your children is to use some of the off-white luminous paint that sells in one down-town store at 35 cents for a one-ounce plastic tube. Paint is Canadian made and is completely waterproof and non-

To use, stir thoroughly and apply at least two coats and allow to dry. Garment should be exposed to sunlight or artificial light for at least 10 seconds before the child starts out on Hallowe'en rounds. This exposure is what activates luminous action in paint. Luminous qualities will last for a period of 20 days.

Fishermen find this paint ideal for lures and bicycle mudguards, outlined with paint, give additional safety to

Halloween costumes in a silky material, treated for retarding risk of catching fire, are in good supply downtown. Selling at $2.29, they're available in sizes four to 12.

Included in the selection are owls, clowns, skeletons, witches, devils, pirates, gypsies and, of course, Peter Rabbit. Costumes come complete with appropriate masks.

Most inexpensive are colorful costumes made of creppaper. There are two sizes, four to seven or eight to 12. These, too, come complete with masks. Selection includes witches, majorettes, space girls and men, Maid Marions, Robin Hoods, handsome Zorros and pistol packing marshals.

Add a pair of the giant latex rubber ears that sell at cents a pair and even you won't be able to recognize your

OTTAWA-Diverse views and some conflict in recommendations were evident at the opening session today of the prime minister's conference on unemployment.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said following the initial session at which 12 groups summarized their recommendations that "It is always helpful to have these views although they constitute a wide diversity."

The proposals ranged all the way from long-range economic planning and public investment advocated by labor to conflicting suggestions from business on tariffs and taxes.

By Sudden Slump

Wall Street, where trading today headed for one of its worst declines of the year took some of the interest away from the wildly fluctuating gold dealings in London.

Toward the close, key issues were recovering slightly from an early slump that saw losses of 10 to 12 points recorded but the downward trend was still markedly sharp. Even golds which opened higher, fell back and ended the day on a mixed note. Trading hit its highest volume since last May.

And by closing, the depression was being reflected in Canadian exchanges where industrials, base metals and western oils were all down after a steady opening.

AT TORONTO golds were steady throughout the day as the stock market closed lower at the stock market closed lower the day as the stock market closed lower at the stock market closed lower the close lower than t

MONTE ROBERTS

The official authorization of a "speaker's corner," a la London, in Beacon Hill Park was attended by circumstances which were viewed with considerable alarm by one school of thought, and as a golden opportunity by

The circumstances were these: At least one would be speaker scoured the city of Victoria in search of a soap-box upon which he could stand while scattering his well-chosen remarks in the general direction of assorted seagulls, ducks, swans, deer, autumn leaves, one-armed drivers, and the rest of the flora and fauna which frequent Beacon Hill Park.

But could he secure a suitable soap-box from which to send forth his syllabic aspirations?

The would-be speaker found lots of soap cartons, but

We must move quickly to establish this industry,

Even this early in the game, a Japanese industrial complex has authorized a survey of the soap-box market, with a view to importing B.C. trees and exporting finished soap-boxes—much in the same way Japan imports B.C. iron ore and former navy cruisers, and exports steel to B.C.

This must be stopped before it starts. We must have a protective tariff to save our soap-box industry.

Fortunately, the Member of Parliament for Victoria is in town, and is obviously anxious to do something about unemployment (if he can find any), so it should be easy to persuade him to take up the matter in Ottawa.

Wreckage of Raft Found; 3 Missing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Wreckage found off the California coast came from the missing raft Leaky Tiki, the Coast Guard said today.

A coast Guard cutter reaching floating debris late Sunday night found no sign of the raft's crew, three men from Puyallup, Wash., but a salvaged life ring had Leaky Tiki painted on it.

The three left Eureka, Calif. on Oct. 7, hoping to and that's to jet to Britain this Fall on BOAC's Rolls-Royce 707!

AND RETURN

Folks feel that way about Canada. But a trip abroad is so tempting . . . especially with BOAC's new, low 17-day Excursion Fare now in effect. In fact, who can resist when you can fly from Toronto to London and return for only $361.00 aboard the fastest 707 jet in service

If you choose to fly in BOAC's jet-prop Britannia you cut costs even more. (Example: 331.00 round-trip Economy Fare from Toronto to London)

Don't settle for "just another vacation". Get BOAC's latest tour folders and travel literature and set your sights on a trip to Europe this fall.

Your Travel Agent or any BOAC or TCA Ticket Office will provide all the facts-including details of BOAC's convenient "Fly now-Pay later" plan. Or fill in the coupon below.
